Title: Use of Free and Open Source Labs to Support Cybersecurity Education

Audience: Students, Professors, Govt.

Presenter(s): Christopher Simpson, Director, National University Center for Cybersecurity

Description:

Operating and maintaining a virtual lab environment can be expensive and requires significant resources. Many organizations and individuals create and share free and open source labs and competitions. In this talk, Chris Simpson will discuss National University's adoption and use of these free labs and competitions in their BS and MS Cybersecurity classes. He will also discuss how they map these labs to meet CAE Knowledge Units and the NICE Framework KSA's. The talk will include a hands-on demo of some free environments.

A recording of the live presentation will be available within 48 hours of the presentation at:
